TOM THUG

Guide to [Ham] Acting

People often ask me: "Arnold, how did you become such a versatile, talented and successful actor in the jungle that is Hoggystown?" And I say to them: "Eat leaden death, you prying Commie scum!" But for you lucky OINK! readers, here are my tips for getting on in the film world. . . .

This is an easy one. Learn a few simple phrases (or "grunts" as we professionals call them), and use them at appropriate moments in your films. "NNNNNGHHHAAA!", "RRRGGLL!" and "AAARGGHAA!" are my favourites. Using such "grunts" avoids you having to learn all that boring dialogue stuff. [A useful reference book is "Elocution: How to Talk Real Proper, Bub" by Swillvester Stylone.]

Very important. You must be able to pose around looking grim, rugged and masculine at all times. This may be slightly difficult if the script calls for you to do anything other than kill people, but you'll get it with practice!

You'll need a big gun and a big knife. And a big head, to take all the credit for the work of your stuntmen.

You must be able to put a steely glint in your eye, adopt a commanding air, and look like you won't take "no" for an answer. Then, when you've negotiated your astronomical acting fee, you can let go of the film producer, and take a holiday till the film starts shooting.

5] CONSISTENCY

If you become popular, your fans will grow to like your "screen character", and they'll want to see you play similar types in every film. You may be gambling with your career if you play "against type" [see Stylone's ill-fated "Waiting for Godot"]. Try to establish an easy-to-maintain image, by playing a robot in your first major film, like I did in "Verminator".

6] PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Very important. Amazingly important. Incredibly, stunningly, indescribably important. How can you expect to be successful in movies if you're as ugly as Barbara Streisand, eh? Buy my books: "Arnold's Bodyshaping for Pigs", "Oil Your Pectorals the Arnold Way", "Arnold's Bristle-Brushing Bible" etc. Great actors like Dustin Hoffman and Wee-Wee Herman owe all their success to my bodybuilding techniques.

7] CLOTHING

Top-notch costumes are essential for your film success. Insist that your director gets all your torn shirts, grimy sweatbands and oily pants from the best Oxfam shops. A top hat is a good idea [makes an excellent field latrine when you're on location].

8] GOOD SCRIPTS, COMPLEX CHARACTERISATION, WIDE EMOTIONAL RANGE, SENSITIVITY, DEEP INTELLECTUAL GRASP OF THE FILM MEDIUM

You won't need any of these. I've never used them!

Meet Uncle Pigg's favourite double-act...

Nasty Laffs & Specs

WHAT'S MORE UNCOMFORTABLE THAN A SCOUT IN YOUR POCKET?!!

A BROWNIE IN YOUR PANTS!! HAR, HAR!!

From an intelligent reader who didn't put a name on their letter! Send your Nasty Laffs to OINK! ... and include your name and address, dumbo!

What is this thing called Oink!?

New readers start here...

— N.M.E. "Comix of '86"

It's out-of-town humour, a sort of freelance conspiracy which Uncle Pigg hopes will start a cult following amongst students and other layabouts.

— THE GUARDIAN

"I don't find Oink! at all offensive. If my children started reading the Sun, then I'd be concerned."

— JOHN PEEL, quoted in THE GUARDIAN

The comic also feels strongly about environmental issues: Burp the Smelly Alien, for example, is a strip that features someone whose innards have a life of their own. In a forthcoming issue his kidney flies over "Smellafield" and uncovers a plot to put nuclear waste down the cracks between pavements.

— THE SUNDAY TIMES

The Rev. David McIlveen believes the publication, called OINK, should be banned.

And a primary school principal who was shown a copy, agrees.

OINK is produced weekly by Fleetway Publications in London and in its latest issue depicts:

- Two pigs playing football with a butcher's head;
- A walnut with an alien coming out of its mouth;
- A character called Billy Bang who explodes in a puff of smoke when he's angry.

— THE SUNDAY WORLD

That's what the 'papers say! Let me know what you think of OINK! Write now! I might even give prizes to the best letters [unless I'm in a mood to hog all the goodies to myself! Heh heh!].

— Uncle Pigg.

There are easier ways to get it! Order your OINK! now!!

Dear Newsagent,
Please deliver/reserve a copy of OINK! magazine for me every month 'til further notice.

Heaven Knows I'm Miserable, Sow

I was happy to be in a successful band,
But Heaven knows I'm miserable, sow,
I wanted to be a pop-star, then I was a pop-star,
But Heaven knows I'm miserable, sow.

In my songs
I could write lots of long lines
That rambled on and on and meandered about and had extra bits in the middle and often didn't rhyme prope-er-ly...

I was pleased to get away with stuff like that,
But Heaven knows I'm miserable, sow.
'Cause now the band's split up and left me flat,
And Heaven knows I'm miserable, sow.

In my sty
I'm starting to realise
That the records were good because of the nice jangly guitar bits that Johnny did and without them all my lyrics start to sound pretty much the same...

Oh woe oh dear moan groan...
I'm so fed up...
Leave me alone, I'm sensitive...
Isn't life awful etc.
(repeat to fade)

Album produced by John Porker.
Available on His Miserable Voice

Also includes the tracks
"Meat is Miserable", "Misery in the Streets of London", "There is a
Drone that Never Shuts Up" and

LARRY the WONDER PIG

POLICE ARE LOOKING FOR THREE BANK ROBBERS WHO ROBBED A BANK TODAY AND WERE LAST SEEN HEADING FOR THE HILLS.

POLICE SAY THESE MEN ARE DANGEROUS AND SHOULD NOT BE APPROACHED

COME ON BOY, LET'S GO AND ROUND UP THE M-SHEEP

YOU GO UP THERE, BOY, AND LOOK FOR STRAGGLERS, I'LL GO DOON HERE.

LARRY WENT VERY CAUTIOUSLY. THE NEWSCAST HAD SCARED HIM.

SUDDENLY HE STOPPED. THROUGH A FENCE HE SPOTTED THREE MEN ACTING SUSPICIOUSLY

HE FOUND THE GAP AND CREEPT THROUGH

YES, THE MEN WERE DIGGING, PUTTING TWO AND TWO TOGETHER, LARRY THOUGHT OF THE BANK ROBBERY.

BRAVELY HE CHARGED AT THE MEN.

FEARING FOR THEIR BOTTOMS THEY.....

..... RAN BLINDLY AND FELL INTO A PIT HIS MASTER HAD PREVIOUSLY FALLEN INTO

BUT LARRY HAD OTHER THINGS ON HIS MIND. HE STARTED DIGGING.

CLASPING THE UNCOVERED OBJECT HE DASHED OFF.

HELLO, LARRY, WHAT HAVE YOU BEEN DIGGING UP?

JUST A MINUTE!
IT'S A ... OH, NO!
DON'T DROP IT.
IT'S A

...MINE!

GRRR... OI! COME BACK WITH THAT FLAMING ANIMAL. HE'S MINE!

NO, HE'S MINE!

NO, MINE!

GRRR, COME BACK, LARRY I'LL TURN YOU INTO BANGERS AND MASH!

IT'S NOT MINE FAULT!

AND SO THE PUNCHLINE GOES ON AND ON.
